I N T R O D U C T I O N

The credit for securing a somewhat complete record of the first Redfields in America, belongs to Mr. Manning Redfield of Manchester, New York, who in 1819, visited Killingworth, Connecticut, and endeavored to find out all he could concerning his great-grandfather, Theophilus Redfield. That same year, Lewis Hamilton Redfield, pioneer newspaper publisher of Syracuse, New York, had a few of his family records printed in slip form and distributed them among his family. So far as is known these printed records are the first genealogical publications in the United States.

In 1838, copies of both these tabulations, came to the attention of William C. Redfield of New York City. He added many facts concerning his own family, made corrections, and supplied some missing data. With the help of Mr. Richard W. Redfield and Mr. Justus S. Redfield, both of New York City, he published a series of genealogical tables in 1839 - - a tremendous undertaking, as genealogical research was rarely even heard of at that time. John Howard Redfield, son of William C. Redfield, revised, corrected and added to the material collected by his father, and gave to us that incentive to further research, by publishing "Genealogical History of the Redfield Family in the United States."

A Coat-of-Arms has always been considered the undisputable appendage of a gentleman. Our democratic form of government makes the personal use of one in this country seem in poor taste. Yet, it reflects the culture of the period in which our ancestors lived, and any member of the family desiring knowledge of the Redfield Coat-of-Arms may easily do so by consulting an authentic Heraldic publication, such as Burk's "General Armory" and W. Cecil Wade's "The Symbolisms of Heraldry."

"I know of no way to judge the future but by the history of the past."

FOREWORD

For several years it has been my ambition to group the several lines of my family, so that those less interested than I, may have as complete a connected family history as I am able, through research, to get. Perhaps in years to come, someone will care to supply missing data.

My interest in family history was inspired by my Aunt Sally Redfield Converse, who, because she had no daughters, and because I had done some research work for her, gave me my Grandmother Redfield's hair bracelet. This family jewel had a gold clasp engraved "Sallie", and since I was a high school girl at the time, it seemed the most beautiful ornament I had ever seen.

About ten years ago, my husband, Hilton Donald McIntyre, urged me to compile my records, and this manuscript is a tribute to the memory of his encouragement. I present it to my children -

Marian Clover McIntyre Sullivan

James Redfield McIntyre

Also to my brother Henry Alonzo Redfield, and to my nephews and nieces.

I shall be gratified if these, and other members of the family use the following records for any purpose they desire.

"The consciousness of noble ancestry is an inspiration to noble living."

Irma Redfield McIntyre

REDFIN

Arms: Argent on a fesse Gules three fleur de lis of the field

Argent (Silver) Denotes Peace and Sincerity

The Fesse or Band is the Military belt or girdle of honour, and signifies that the bearer must be always in readiness to undergo the business of the public weal.

Gules (Red) Denotes Military Fortitude and Magnanimity. It is also the martyr's colour.

The Fleur de lis is the emblem of Purity.

The name Redfield does not appear in Burke's Encyclopedia of Heraldry, but Redfin does.

A William Redefeld is mentioned as holding an ecclesiastical position in 1213, in the reign of King John.

The name Redfield is not a common one in the United States, yet many bearing the name are found distributed in all the states.

I. * William Redfin came to the Colony of Mass. some time between 1630 and 1639. He was known to have had a house and four acres of land in 1639. This house was on the south side of the Charles River, about six miles from Boston and he was one of the first settlers on that side of the river. This was not far from Nonantum Hill. Records of the Proprietors of Cambridge confirm his ownership of this land, and that he sold it to Edward Jackson in September, 1646. It is probable that at this time he joined other neighbors, including the younger Winthrops, moving to New London, Conn., though no positive record of his residing there appears until about 1653. New London was at first called Harbor of Pequot.

On May 29, 1654, Jonathan Brewster (son of Elder William Brewster of the Mayflower) "Conveyed to William Redfin ten acres of arable land lying at Munhegan, of the plane of said Brewster's land and on the north side thereof & C, with the ground whereon said Redfin hath built a house, with a small garden thereto belonging, already fenced in." This location is still called Brewsters Neck, and is on the north side of Poquetannuck Cove, about seven miles north of New London (now called Ledvard.) This was a part of the large farm for which Brewster had obtained title from Uncas, the Mohegan Indian Chief. From this, we judge that William Redfin must have built this house not later than 1653. With him at this time was his wife, Rebecca, two daughters, Lydia and Rebecca, and a son James.

In April, 1657 William Redfin bought four acres of land from Richard Houghton. This land had a stone house on it, and was located on the west side of the river, north of New London, and west of the present Norwich-New London Pike. The town added a grant of six acres in the rear of this property.

After the year 1662, the name Redfin gradually took the form of Redfield.

There is no doubt whatever that William Redfin was our immigrant ancestor, and that for some unknown reason - perhaps deliberately, or as a result of careless pronunciation, the name changed to Redfield.

SECOND GENERATION

II. James, only son of William (I) and Rebecca Redfin, was first a tanner by trade. He probably left New London before 1667. In 1671 his name appeared as a resident of Tisbury, Martha's Vineyard. In 1673 he lived in Saybrooke, Conn., and was then a weaver by vocation. The explanation for this change of trade seems to be that James Redfield bound himself for five years to Hugh Roberts of New London, Conn. to learn "the art and trade of tanning." Mr. Roberts broke up his establishment, and moved away before the five years as apprentice were up, thus releasing the young man from his obligation. We infer that the deciding factor for his change of trade was that weaving was more remunerative.

About the time the Colonists were having trouble with the Indians (King Philip's War) Saybrooke was an important military post, with a fort and garrison. The Colonists were successful, and Captain Robert Chapman, commander of the fort and garrison, considered one family all that was necessary for its protection. He recommended James Redfield as a suitable person. He resided at Saybrooke with his wife, children and one man servant.

In 1683, Saybrooke granted James Redfield an acre of land at Pipe Staves Point, and in 1686 another acre. This was near the fort, and probably near where the monument to Lady Alice Butler now stands.

In 1693, James Redfield was recorded as a resident of Fairfield, Conn., and it was here that his son Theophilus, of Killingworth, Conn., visited him. He made over to Theophilus, the parcel of land at Saybrooke.

Introduction

The purpose of this study is to investigate the effects of various factors on the growth of a certain plant species. The study was conducted over a period of six months, during which time the plants were grown under different conditions. The results of the study are presented in the following sections.

The first section discusses the methodology used in the study, including the selection of the plant species, the experimental design, and the data collection process. The second section presents the results of the study, showing the growth of the plants under different conditions. The third section discusses the implications of the results and the conclusions drawn from the study.

The methodology used in this study was a controlled experiment. The plants were grown in a greenhouse, where the temperature and humidity were kept constant. The plants were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group was grown under normal conditions, while the experimental group was grown under different conditions. The data was collected by measuring the height of the plants at regular intervals.

The results of the study show that the growth of the plants was significantly affected by the different conditions. The experimental group showed a higher growth rate than the control group. This suggests that the conditions used in the experiment were favorable for the growth of the plant species.

The implications of the results are that the plant species studied is more resilient to different conditions than previously thought. This has important implications for the cultivation of the plant species in different environments.

THIRD GENERATION

III. Theophilus, oldest son of James and Elizabeth Mox Redfield, was a joiner by trade. The Greek translation of Theophilus is "A lover of God."

Soon after he became of age, he bought a small piece of land for a homestead, on what is now the Boston Post Road near Clinton, Conn., on Long Island Sound, at that time called Killingworth. About 1715, disturbed by the travel past his home, which he said, no longer gave him any privacy, he bought 120 acres of land on Chestnut Hill in North Killingworth, and built a home. This house is still standing and marked by the State "Theophilus Redfield House - Built in 1718." (I have a snapshot of the rear of this house.) Chestnut Hill is a ridge about a mile and a half west of the town of Killingworth. It extends north and south nearly two miles, and is between the forks of the Hammonasset River. The view is magnificent. I have been in this house, and have in my possession, the iron toaster listed in the inventory of Theophilus Redfield's estate. Mr. Harry Redfield, another descendant, operates an antique shop on the Boston Post Road in Clinton, and has the hand wrought iron door latch and crude corner cupboard taken from the Boston Post Road house when it was torn down.

Theophilus Redfield was appointed on many important town management committees and was known as Sergeant Redfield. Military titles, no matter how humble, had some weight in those days. He was buried in a small country cemetery about a mile and a half south of Chestnut Hill and the inscription on his tombstone, still standing reads

In Memory of
Mr. Theophilus Redfield
Who died February ye 14th A.D. 1759 in ye 77th year of his age.

His wife was burried in Clinton Cemetery, near the Cong. Church. The inscription on her stone reads

In Memory of
Mrs. Theophilus Redfield, wife of Mr. Theophilus Redfield
Who died Jan. 12th, 1770
in her 81st year.

The will of Theophilus Redfield was approved March 6, 1759, and reads in part "---being in a comfortable state of health, and of sound mind and memory, thanks be given unto God therefor, Calling to mind that it is appointed for all men once to Die; ---I give and Recommend my Soul into the hands of God that gave it, and my Body I Recommend to the Earth --nothing doubting but at the General Recurrection I shall Receive the same again by the Mighty Power of God." He gave "unto Priscilla, my Dearly beloved wife", one third of his real estate and of his personal property "to be at her dispose forever." The rest of his estate was given to his nine sons and four daughters, the oldest son receiving a double portion. His entire estate was valued at 431 pounds, 18 shillings, 8 pence.

The inventory wording is amusing and contained such items as 1 linen shirt - a ditto - 1 strait Bodied Coat - 1 pair yarn stockings black blew - 1 pair of ditto - 1 old bed in ye chamber - 4 pair ye best sheets - 6 pair ye next best sheets- 2 pair old dittos - best tablecloth - 1 toasting iron (I have this) - 4 silver teaspoons- some casks in Josiah's cellar. There were 380 items mentioned before the most valuable part was recorded, carts, tubs-wells, hogs-heads, all his joiners tools, books, many pieces of pewter in all shapes, sails, chairs, tables, chests, and an old sword and belt and finally;

"Ye 6th part of a Cyder Mill and Irons
Ye half of ye Winter corn on ye ground in Josiah's lot
Ye half of ye corn in ye orchard.
1 pair oxen, 1 cow with calf, 1 ditto not with calf, 1 two year old,
2 peor two year olds, 15 sheep, 1 mare, The Dwelling house, and Old Bern, 1 Large Swine, 1 barrow shote, Ditto, 7 yds and a quarter of plain cloth, 15 acres 1 quarter 20 rods of land being ye homestead including ye orchard - 1 acre and a half of land at ye east end of Theops homestead - 91 acres and a half of land on ye west side of ye highway being part of ye homestead and other land adjoining - 30 acres of land in ye additional grant - 13 acres of land on ye lower end of Chestnut Hill Ledge."

FOURTH GENERATION

IV. *Theophilus Jr., son of Theophilus (III) and Priscilla Grinnell Redfield, recognized Church Covenant 3-17-1736. His brother Teleg was appointed 2nd Lieut., in the 10th Co. of the 2nd Conn. Regt. formed to aid in the campaign against the French. In 1759-1760 Theophilus Redfield was a Sergeant in this company, and in 1761 an ensign.

A son, Nathan (by his first wife) died at sea on his return from the expedition against Havana in 1762. It was another son, Nathan (by his second wife) whose tombstone inscription reads:

"Here old Nathan Redfield lies
Nobody laughs and nobody cries;
Where he's gone or how he fares,
Nobody knows and Nobody cares."

(Tombstone record S.E. New Haven Co., Conn.)

Four sons were born to Theophilus and Mary Buell Redfield, and the oldest Eliakim, is our ancestor. Two sons and two daughters were born to Theophilus and Martha Gray Redfield.

VI. Ezra, son of Eliakim and Priscilla Nettleton Redfield, moved to Vermont after his marriage. The second Vermont U.S. census, taken in 1800, gives his residence as Baltimore, Windsor Co., and has the following data for him:

Name	Free white males under 10 years of age	Free white males of 26 and under 45 in- cluding heads of families	Free white females under 10 years of age
	Free white females of 16 and under 26 including heads of families		Free white females of 45 and upwards

Lucius Redfield, my grandfather, may have been born in Baltimore, instead of Springfield as stated in the Redfield genealogy, as the three free white males and 1 free white female under ten years of age were, Eliakim, Thankful, William and *Lucius Redfield. The free white female of 45 and upwards may have been his wife's mother. Ezra Redfield moved to Shortsville, Ontario Co., N.Y. about 1805. I copied his tombstone record in a small cemetery near Shortsville. It read "In memory Ezra Redfield who died Sept. 14, 1812 age 44." I have been unable to find where his wife was buried.

THE HISTORY OF THE

REIGN OF HENRY THE SEVENTH OF ENGLAND

BY

SEVENTH GENERATION

VII *Lucius Redfield, son of Ezra and Lavina Lockwood Redfield, was a carriage maker by trade. He was very young when his parents moved from Springfield, Vermont to Canandaigua. He served in Canandaigua as an apprentice while learning his trade of wagon maker. Ten years after his marriage he moved from Canandaigua, New York to Auburn, Geauga Co., Ohio, a part of the Western Reserve. His older brother William may have had some influence in his decision to go West, for he took a trip to what he called "The Western Country" in 1818. He traveled overland and by river boat from Canandaigua to St. Louis, Mo. via Pittsburgh. I have the original diary of my great Uncle William Redfield which he wrote on this trip and later gave to my grandfather Lucius. (I have also his picture and that of his wife Margaret.) This diary tells an interesting story of the various towns he passed through enroute, and what they "did contain" at that period of time.

Lucius Redfield bought a forty acre farm at Auburn Center in 1852. This was the year so many New York state people migrated to the Western Reserve, and he traveled overland with friends and relatives, using ox teams as a means of transportation! The house my grandfather built, modernized in outward appearance, still stands directly opposite the cemetery where he is buried. Sophis Dutton bought this property, and her daughters have a map showing a section marked "Redfield's Orchard." He also built a wagon shop and was very successful at this trade. It was here that his wife Sally died, and three years later he married a second time.

As he grew older, his health began to fail, and he lived in the various homes of his children. He was very dapper in appearance. He died at the home of his daughter, Julia Stafford, in Niles, Ohio.

Sally Canfield Redfield was an unusual woman. She had great ability, was industrious, had good taste, was a good needlewoman, a faithful, loving wife and mother. Pioneer Women of the Western Reserve say of her "Mrs. Lucius Redfield (Sally Canfield), a sacrificing noble woman, was a resident of early days." A rather remarkable incident occurred at the time of her death, and was told to my mother by Aunt Betsey Canfield. Her daughter Agnes was married to Jerome Hinkley, her daughter Eliza gave birth to her daughter (Minnie Hart Butcliffe) and she herself and her baby died--all within a lapse of thirty-six hours. Recorded dates seem to verify this statement.

*Henry Redfield, son of Lucius and Sally Canfield Redfield, was a wagon maker by trade. For many years he had a carriage shop at South Newbury, Geauga County, Ohio. Later he became a house painter, and was noted for his honest workmanship. He was in the hospital corps in the Civil War, as an ambulance repair man, and was in the siege of Nashville. (I still have the trunk he used, a small one marked - "Henry Redfield, Cleveland, Ohio.") His health was greatly affected by this exposure, and he was brought home by a companion, invalided. Dread tuberculosis was feared for some time, and he finally went to Colorado, where his niece, Francelia Hart Keep lived. There he worked on the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad project in its early days. One of the most important events in the history of Geauga Co., was the organization of the Womans' Suffrage Political Club, January 4, 1874. My father was made organizing secretary. He served Newbury township as constable, in 1856, 1857, 1858 and 1859. It was after his return from Colorado, that he took up house painting, a trade he followed for several years. The paint affected his delicate lungs, and he secured a position as clerk in the old New England Hotel in Cleveland. Still later, he became companion to his first wife's brother, Solomon Burnett, who lived with his sister, Elmira Burnett Reynolds, in her charming, luxuriant home on Prospect Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. This street was at that time in the beautiful residential section near the well known Euclid Avenue. Isaac Reynolds was then manager of Cleveland's American House Hotel. After the death of Solomon Burnett, my father worked in the coach painting department of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and finally retired to his home in South Newbury. While visiting his sister Agnes Bartholemew, he was thrown from a light wagon by a spirited horse. The injuries received from this fall resulted in his death two weeks later.

He was a good provider, a kind and loving husband and father, and a favorite brother. He endeared himself to all who knew him.

Henry Redfield Line

Winifred Agnes Redfield, dau. of Henry and Celinda Miller Redfield, was very musical. As a young woman, she taught piano lessons, having a large class in Geauga County. She must have inherited some of Sally Canfield Redfield's traits, for the same tributes could be paid to her. She was devoted to her family and a true, loyal friend. She was active in several fraternal and patriotic organizations. It was a rare privilege to spend some time with this musical family. Winnie and Dan, pianists of unusual ability. Date with cello, Lawrence and sometimes Dave or Date with violins, Dave with his saxophone, while Stell improvised obligatos in a high clear soprano voice. All had good voices, and Dan an especially beautiful tenor voice.

Henry Alonzo Redfield, son of Henry and Celinda Miller Redfield, was one of the family's self made men. In his young manhood, he attended Baldwin University, and later, Wooster University, and began a career of teaching soon after. His first school was the one room district school at Huntsburg, Ohio; then a small school at West Park, suburb of Cleveland. His next position was general high school work at Burton, Ohio, then to Nottingham, Ohio as superintendent of schools. While there, he was called to organize the Bratanahal Public Schools, and was the first Superintendent of that exclusive Cleveland suburb. For several years, he served as Sec. of the Northeastern Ohio Teachers' Association, and was known as "Ready" by his co-workers and friends.

Desiring a business career, he went into a prominent real estate company in Cleveland, leaving sometime later to become District Manager of Ginn and Company, school book publishers. After four years, he left Ginn and Company to go into the business of barrel hoop manufacturing in Mississippi. Preferring the north, he joined the firm of Dobson Evans, school supplies, Columbus, Ohio, leaving them to become Treasurer and Sales Manager of the A. J. Nystrom Map Company of Chicago, a position he held until his retirement in 1939.

A cultivated habit for remembering faces and names, a wonderful memory, the ability to meet all occasions with quick repartee, or an apt quotation from the classics, a good mixer, a loyal, loving son, husband, father and brother, he is loved by all who know him.

Many of his outstanding traits, especially his excellent memory and love of good literature, was no doubt inherited from our mother, who was often spoken of as being fifty years ahead of her time.

Chapter I

§ 1. The concept of a function

Let  $x$  and  $y$  be two variables.

Suppose that  $y$  is determined by  $x$  by a certain law.

Then we say that  $y$  is a function of  $x$ .

We denote this by writing

where  $f$  is a symbol for the law.

§ 2. The domain of a function

Let  $f$  be a function.

The domain of  $f$  is the set of all  $x$  for which  $f(x)$  is defined.

Let  $x_0$  be a point in the domain of  $f$ .

Then  $f(x_0)$  is a definite number.

Mary Louise Tredinnick

This poem very aptly expresses my own search for first hand information in all its sad diversity and perversive evasion. I have visited cemeteries and studied tomb-stones in Canada, Mass., Conn., R.I., Pa., Ind., Ill., and Ohio. Many times in seeking probate court records, I have been told "We have nothing before 1830." - - I have suddenly had to retreat - - snakes - - I have nearly broken my ankle by stumbling into unseen holes in almost forgotten cemeteries - - It has sometimes taken me a long time (invariably on a hot day) to turn my car around on an extremely narrow wooded road, full of old ruts, and a deep ditch on either side - - - Yet, with all these unpleasant discouragements, I have been more than recompensed by finding some missing data.

I believe my greatest genealogical thrills came during the year 1936. Three friends accompanied me on a motor trip to the National meeting of the General Society of Mayflower Descendants at Plymouth, Mass. After a few days in and about Boston, we made Plymouth our headquarters, and after sessions visited nearby historical points of interest.

The tiny cemetery where the tomb-stones of John and Priscilla Alden are found tells, from the inscriptions, a tragic story of the loss of life at sea of those early settlers. The privilege of spending as much time as we wished in the home of our ancestors, John and Priscilla Alden, at Duxbury was a privilege never to be forgotten. Driving further south, we went to Little Compton and old Seaconnet, Rhode Island. There we saw the graves of William and Elizabeth Alden Pabodie - - the cemetery being right in the middle of The Commons." Stopping when, and where we pleased in Conn., we finally drove back into the hills of the present town of Killingworth. We asked the oldest residents where to find the cemeteries in which the early settlers were buried. A half day's search revealed family names galore, but not our line. Tired and discouraged, we made our way back to the Boston Post Road in Clinton, (Old Killingworth). Seeing a gentleman sitting in front of an antique shop, we asked him for information and were overjoyed when we found that, out of all the residents of Clinton, we had accidentally met Mr. Harry Redfield, another descendant of Theophilus Redfield. Having lived in Clinton all his life, he told us of the one old cemetery we had missed, and of course, our ancestors were buried there. He said that if we would come back early the next morning, he would arrange for someone to take charge of his shop, and not only direct us to the cemetery, but also take us to the Theophilus Redfield house built in 1728.

We drove back to Hartford, spent the night there, and by seven o'clock the next morning, were on our way in a dense fog, to Clinton. Mr. Redfield was waiting for us, and casually remarked that the fog would soon "burn off." We went to the cemetery, reset the tomb stone of Theophilus Redfield which we found lying flat on the ground. Then continued on to the Redfield House. Mr. Redfield told me that the tenant was a "foreign woman" and "very peculiar." - - and that she made and sold "fancy work." He advised me to buy a piece as sort of an entrance fee. I paid $4.00 for a small crochet piece made of wrapping cord -- a piece which found its way subsequently to the waste basket -- it was too crude to keep. This purchase however, paved the way for me to buy at a nominal price, the family toaster trivet, hand made, and rusty with age and non-usage. I also saw the mate to the sea chest which was one of my father's choice possessions.

Last summer, my daughter and I found the graves of Ezra <sup>Redfield</sup> and Miriam ~~Redfield~~, William Canfield and Perez Antisdale in small cemeteries near Canandaigua, N.Y.

In Canada, I have seen the graves of the first McIntyres, and the Buchans, and Revolutionary marker of Edward Mitchell in Pa. Ohio marks the last resting place of Salmon and Celinda Leonard Miller, Alonzo and Jemima Mills Miller, Lucius and Sally Canfield Redfield and my own father, mother, husband and sisters, Winifred and Alice.

KILLINGWORTH

SINCE many of our ancestors came from Killingworth, it seems quite fitting that a little of its history, especially that part in which some of our own forefathers took part, should be related.

In March 1663, the General Court appointed a committee to view Hamonascett (Indian name) to see if it was fit for a plantation. Their first report made in July, said thirty families could live there comfortably, and the final report, made in October, gave a list of the original planters, which included both *Edward Griswold and *Josiah Hull, who had grants of land. In order to retain these lands, the planters had to establish residence on these grants within two years. Edward Griswold, his wife and younger children were among the first to move there, about 1663.

It was not until May 1667, that the name was changed to Kenilworth. Edward Griswold was a member of the General Court which renamed it, it is thought, in honor of his English home. This name was later corrupted to Killingworth.

The main street of the present Clinton, Conn., marks the site of this early settlement. On March 10, 1663-4 *Edward Griswold and *Josiah Hull, were appointed to lay out lands, although they as founders had started the settlement in 1662-3. There were but 21 families at first, and the General Court had ruled that no less than 30 families should formally create a town. It was not until 1663 that this requirement was met. The residents had received two separate Indian deeds in 1663 and 1669 and had made payments to the town of Saybrooke in 1684 to settle a claim it made to a part of the territory.

Foreword

John Quincy Adams once said, "I had rather have one drop of Puritan blood in my veins, than all that ever flowed in the veins of Kings and Princes."

Henry Justin Smith in his The Master of the Mayflower, has presented some very human information. He says that three men planned the voyage - John Carver, over fifty years old, experienced and wise; Robert Cushman, over conscientious and nervous, but devoted to the cause. Both these men belonged to the religious group called Separatists, radical Wing of the Puritans. It was quite natural for them to want to go where they could attain freedom in worship. The third man was Thomas Weston, restless, ambitious and ready to speculate in adventure. He and a group of his associates called The Merchant Adventurers, put up the funds for the trip.

The three leaders hired Captain Christopher Jones, a man who was said to have had piratical ancestors, He knew American Waters. His ship, the Mayflower was a cargo carrying boat, larger than most of those crossing at that time, and considered a fine ship. Weston, had come in contact with the Pilgrims as early as 1616/17 and had helped them from time to time. He preferred to stay at home and draw dividends. It was planned that each shareholder was to put up ten pounds, the Pilgrims to labor seven years, after which there would be an equal division. The Pilgrims were to send back shiploads of produce, especially the fine woods so much desired by England.

It was originally planned to locate in the Northern part of the Virginia Colony, and that two ships would make the trip. On August 15, 1620, the Mayflower and Speedwell put up to sea, after many delays. Four days later, Capt. Reynolds of the Speedwell reported that his ship was leaking badly. He returned to Dartmouth. The sea was calm at first, but severe storms overtook them in mid-ocean. They sighted land November 20th, not the Virginia they had planned for, but Cape Cod, far north of their intended destination. Captain Jones said he could not find a safe course to the mouth of the Hudson River. Winter was near. Many were ill. They decided to put in to Cape Cod, but before doing so, the men met in the ship's cabin and drew up the famous Mayflower Compact.

First Generation

Most historians agree that John Alden was born in England, but among all the Pilgrims, his origin is most hidden. . Henry Jusin Smith in his The Master of the Mayflower says he probably lived in Southampton, and that his father was George Alden, arrowmaker, who died just before the Pilgrims sailed. Charles L. Alden thinks it quite likely that he was born in Hove, England.

John Alden had no part in the life of the Pilgrims at Scrooby or Leyden. He was hired as a cooper, or ships' carpenter - - an important job in those days, one corresponding to the skilled mechanic of today. His principal duty was to see that the casks of fresh water, beer, and other liquids were kept in good condition - a very important job. He was about 21 years old when he came to America, and was said to have been "the stripling who first leaped upon the rock." Longfellow describes him as fair haired and azure eyed, with a delicate complexion. He was the tallest and handsomest man in the Colony. He joined the company at South Hampden, "Where the ship victuled, and being a hopeful young man, was much desired, but left to his own liking to go or stay when he came here; but he stayed and married here." He evidently learned to evaluate the Pilgrims at their true worth, for he elected to stay with them as a member of the Colony. He was the seventh and youngest man to sign The Compact. That he was well educated is shown by the fact that although the youngest, he could sign his name, by no means a common thing in those days. He remained for a time in Plymouth, where he was distinguished for his practical wisdom, integrity and decorum. He first served the Plymouth Pilgrims as sort of clerk for the Colony, especially in military matters.

John Alden moved to Duxbury, Mass., in 1637. Duxbury was named for Duxborough Hall, the ancestral home of Miles Standish, and he, with Standish, was one of its founders. His original grant of land there was 169 acres, north of Blue Fish River, and "his house on a rise of land (Eagle Tree Point) near Eagle Tree Pond," and about eight miles from Plymouth. This house burned and was replaced by the present Alden house in 1653. He and his wife, Priscilla, lived in the new house with his son Jonathan, his wife, and four children, and both died in this house.

Pilgrim John was a member of Capt. Miles Standish's Duxbury Company in 1643; in 1646 and for several succeeding years, he was one of the Council of War, for the apprehension of Indians; Deputy to the General Court 1641, 1642, 1644, 1649; one of the Court of Assistants in 1633; Representative for Duxbury 1641 to 1649 (The general court of the Old Colony); acting assistant to all governors except Carber; Magistrate; surveyor of highways, and agent for the Colony.

The last surviving signer of The Compact, John Alden was meek, humble, and pious, yet he commanded great influence among his associates. He died "in good old age, and an old man and full of years; and was gathered to his people, and his sons buried him." It is not known when Priscilla died, but she and her husband attended the funeral of one of the governors in 1680. It is generally conceded that her death occurred before 1689. Their burial place is unknown.

There is a tiny cemetery, east of the Boston-Plymouth Highway and not far from Duxbury. The inscriptions on the tombstones tell a tragic story of those early days, when so many were lost at sea. Two stones are marked John Alden-Priscilla Alden. A feeling of reverence for these real people, our ancestors, almost overwhelms one, when visiting their home - the Shrine located in a somewhat isolated spot near Duxbury.

Elizabeth, dau. of John and Priscilla Mullens Alden, is said to be the first white woman born on New England soil. Henry W. Longfellow was one of her descendants. As Her father was a magistrate at the time of her marriage, he probably officiated at her wedding.

First Generation

*William Mullens, or Molines, was a French Huguenot refugee, who probably descended from the ancient family of De Moulines.

Henry Justin Smith says, "Notable among the more wealthy passengers was William Mullens, boot and shoe dealer of Dorking. Mullens took nine shares in Weston's company. He was a man rather along in years. He was taking with him his second wife for a new life in Virginia, and also a son and daughter, the far famed Priscilla." "William Mulline, the sturdy man of property, made a will bequeathing his estate, including a large stock of boots and shoes. The witnesses were Carver, Dr. Heale (the doctor hired for the trip) and Captain Jones."

Bradford, in his history of Plymouth Plantation, lists our ancestral Mayflower passengers as follows: "William Mullines, a member of the Leyden Church" - - - "William Mullins or Mollines was born of French parents" - - - owing to persecution he moved into Holland." "Mr. Molines and his wife, his son, and his servant, dyed the first winter. Only his daughter Priscilla survived and married with John Alden, who are both living and have 11 children, and their eldest daughter is married and hath five children." - - - "Mr. William Mullins and his wife and 2 children Joseph, and Priscilla and a servant Robart Carter."

William Mullins was the tenth signer of The Compact, and one of the most efficient of the organizers and managers of Plymouth Colony. "Pious and well deserving, endowed also with considerable outward estate, and had it been the will of God that he had survived might have proved a valuable instrument in his place." His will refers to his wife, Alice, and to a son William and a dau. Sarah, who were left in England. In his will he asked Mr. Carver "alsoe to have a speciall eye to my man Robert wch hethe not so approved himselfe as I would he should have done." He left a share of his estate to his daughter Sarah Mullens Blunder, who remained in England. His son, William, Jr., who had also remained in England had to come to America for his share. He did so and located in Duxbury. The balance of William Mullen's estate was left to his daughter Priscilla. As he was considered wealthy, her portion was rather large.

Second Generation

*Priscilla, dau. of William and Alice Mullens, was said to have been fair and fragile and to have dark eyes. She was often called the Mayflower of Plymouth. She was but 16 years of age when she came to the new world, and only 17 when she married John Alden.

According to the best authorities, well born women whose fathers occupied the station of life her father did, wore full silk skirts, pointed stomachers, full puffed sleeves and lace collars - not quite the picture we have of her in the drab Pilgrim gown she wore after her marriage. After the death of her father, mother and brother, Joseph, that first winter, Gov. Bradford took her into his home and she was taught spinning and other domestic duties.

First Generation

*John Pabodie (Paybody-Peabodie) immigrant, came to Plymouth, Mass., with his wife, Isabel, in 1636. No doubt, his son William came at the same time. In his will, he bequeathed to his youngest son, William, one shilling. John Pabodie was admitted freeman 1-12-1637/8. A freeman was the only one who could represent the people at the Colonial Courts. That same year he received a grant of ten acres of land on the "Duxbarrow side." Thirty acres of meadow at North River, was granted him 11-2-1640. He was a member of a jury which convicted three young Englishmen for the murder of an Indian 9-4-1638., and of the "Grand Inquest" of the original proprietors of Freetown in 1659. He was one of the "Sureties" on a neighbor's bond, June 4, 1645. His will was dated 7-16-1649. He had twelve children.

Pabodie Lineage

Second Generation

*William, youngest son of William and Isabel Pabodie, grew up in Duxbury and "acquired a great deal of competency for himself," by calling in deeds of land at various times. He bought a dwelling house, stable, garden and meadow in Dorchester 11-1-1648. Yeoman, 1648; freeman of Plymouth Colony; town clerk of Duxbury; representative to the General Court of Plymouth Colony 6-5-1651. Plymouth records say "he was a man much employed in public affairs and of much respectability." He was a civil and military leader in Duxbury.

In 1675 he, with others, purchased a large tract of land from the Seaconet Indians, known as Little Compton. Her moved there in 1684. Until the year 1745 this was a part of Massachusetts.

Boatman and planter 1672; wheelwright 1681, surveyor. He was one of "Twenty-nine persons who appeared at Plymouth, July 22, 1673, and proved their respective shares on a grant of land at Seaconet." In his will he gave to his daughter Lydia "one sette of Green Curtaines together with the vallens thereunto belonging." also -- "one shilling."

The June 17, 1717 issue of the Boston News-Letter, had the following item: "Little Compton, 31, May. This morning died here Mrs. Elizabeth Paybody in the 93rd year of her age. She was the daughter of John Alden Esq. and Priscilla his wife, daughter of Mr. William Mullins. This John Alden and Priscilla Mullins were married at Plymouth in New England, where their daughter, Elizabeth was born. She was exemplarily, virtuous, and pious and her memory is blessed." her father, who was at the time of her marriage a magistrate, no doubt officiated at her wedding. Her tombstone reads "Here lyeth the body of Elizabeth Pabodie who dyed May ye thirty-first 1717, and in the ninety-fourth year of her age." They had 13 children, all born in Duxbury. I have visited this territory in Rhode Island. Seaconet is a quaint picture out of the past, and not as yet, commercialized as Provincetown. Little Compton is my ideal of a New England Village. Both William and Elizabeth Alden Pabodie are buried in the cemetery in the center of Little Compton Commons.

First Generation

Lawrence Antisell came to America about 1700, when he was a lad of ten or twelve years. His fine slik coat, a family memento is thought to be evidence that he was of good parentage. No record of his occupation has been found, but family tradition says that his title of Captain, indicates he was a seafaring man. The year of his marriage, 1731, he lived in Norwich, Conn.

In 1752, he bought land in Willington, Tolland Co., Conn., and moved his family there. After the death of his wife, this homestead was exchanged for land in Madison, Ohio. His estate was valued at 186 pounds. He had 13 children.

Second Generation

Perez, son of Lawrence and Mary Armstrong Antisell, lived in Willington, Conn., with his parents, until he was a young man. Ludlow, Mass., records, state that he was the first settler of that part of Ludlow, known as Facing Hills. The log cabin he built there, antedated those of the other settlers. (Ludlow was no doubt a part of Springfield, as it did not become a town until 1774)

During the Revolutionary War, he enlisted from Ludlow (5-20-1775) in Captain Isaac Colton's Company, Col. Brewer's Regt, later Rufus Putnam's 9th Regt.

Vermont Revolutionary records state that he served in Capt. Elias Well's Militia Co., who marched to Royalton and Haverhill on the Alarm of October, 1780. Later, he served in the Vermont Militia as Ensign of the 7th Co., 2nd Regt., 3rd Brigade, -Commission dated March 5, 1791.

He was still a resident in Windsor Co., in 1786, when he was assessed for some live stock he owned. The Vermont census of 1791 listed him as living in Rochester, Windsor Co., Vermont, with him wife, four sons under sixteen and two daughters.

Soon after the Revolutionary War, the spelling of the family name was changed from Antisell, to Antisdale.

Perez Antisdale must have prospered in Vermont, for in 1801 he bought a large tract of land in Farmington, Ontario Co., N.Y. He had six children by his first wife, and six by his second wife.

First Generation

Walter Harris came to America on the William and Mary in 1632. With him was his wife, and two sons, Gabriel and Thomas. He settled at Weymouth, Mass., where he lived for twenty years, going from there to Pequot Harbor.

His first application for a house, was from Dorchester. An item on the New London town record said "Goodman Harries is chosen by the Towne ordinary keeper." He died the day the vote was taken on this, and another item dated Nov. 6, 1654, states "Widow Harris was granted by voat also to keep an ordinary if she will."

This family was considered well to do, and was said to own the most pweter in the town.

Second Generation

Gabriel, son of Walter and Mary Fry Harris, came to America with his parents in 1632. An early New London, Conn., record says "Goodman Harries for his son Gabriel hath given him six ackers of upland for an house lot joynning next to his fathers." This was probably a wedding gift.

Tradition gives us an interesting romance about this ancestor. A ship loaded with English emigrants, put in to Pequot Harbor for shelter from a bad storm. They anchored near the lonely Harris home. Gabriel went out in his fishing boat, and invited them all to his father's house. They landed and spent the night in feasting and "great hilarity." Gabriel singled out young Elizabeth Abbot, and paid her such devout attention, that when the party returned to their ship, they were bethrothed lovers. He painted and rigged

First Generation

* William Buell, immigrant ancestor, sailed from Plymouth, England on the Mary and John March 31, 1630. He was one of those religious enthusiasts, known as Puritans. He and "Goode" Buell, were in a company of people conducted by Rev. John Wareham. They landed at Nantacket, Boston Bay, May 30. "Goode" Buell may have been his mother, or Hinman says, his wife. She died at Windsor, 12-3-1639. William Buell was a joiner by trade. He lived at Dorchester, Mass. for five years, leaving there to become one of the Proprietors of the new settlements at Windsor, Conn. He lived at Windsor five years before he married Mary Post. She had come from England on the same boat with him in 1630. At sailing time, she became separated from her parents, who remained behind to look for her. They followed on the next boat, but both were lost at sea. William Buell was in the first land division in Windsor in 1636. He was a man of "considerable position in society, a man of property and good personal character." Freeman 5-13-1669. Halsey says the name was also spelled Be Welle and Be Ville.

He became an extensive land holder, owning large estates in Killingworth. He held many responsible public offices, as surveyor, member of the General Court, Justice of Peace (1704 to 1720) Deputy (1692 to 1715). An esteemed citizen, he is on the town records as "a gentleman." Freeman 9-14-1689. He contracted to cut the timber for the old fort at Springfield.

Camp Lineage

*Nicholas Camp came to America from Nazing County, Essex, England, in 1630, locating at Salem, Mass. Later he moved to Milford Conn. The first General Court (town meeting) held Nov. 20, 1639, granted forty-four church members the franchise as "Free planters." Nicholas Camp's name was on this list of town records. Another town record, dated Feb. 7, 1643, states - "It is agreed that a footway to the meeting-house be allowed and mayntayned with Convenient Stiles from the west end. The Stiles to be mayntained by bro: Nicholas Camp at the West end...." The first death of an adult in Milford was that of Sarah Camp, his wife. "She had twins on the second day of September, 1645 and was doing well till the night of the fourth, when she was taken very ill with a cold. She died on the sixth, being the last day of the week in the morning, and was buried the evening after in the garden of Mr. Peter Prudden, Pastour." This plot was used as a burial ground until 1675. The name of Nicholas Camp is among the founders of Milford whose names appear on the Memorial Bridge. Hop raising was an important industry at this time. Sergeant Camp had a grant for a hop garden for "as much land as he should want beside the Paaqusett (Housatonic) River." He was also granted land for a new warehouse by the town. These grants were a method of encouraging trade and commerce. Nicholas Camp was Deputy of Milford 1670-71-72.

Canfield Lineage

Foreword

Family Tradition tells us that three brothers, Thomas, Matthew and Nathaniel Canfield, came to America from England, landed at Plymouth, Mass., then went overland to Conn.

An old English Encyclopedia States that "James De Philo of Normandy, France, became a loyal subject of the Crown in the 14th Century. He received the cognomen Cann De Philo in distinction of land grant." Also - "James De Philo, a French Huguenot and citizen of Normandy, France, in reward for meritorious services to the Crown of England, received honorable mention, and a new cognomen and a grant of land on the River Cam, County of Yorkshire, England." Later research assumes that a mistake was made in dates, as no Huguenot would become a loyal British subject in 1550 when James De Philo was living. Another reason for doubting the authenticity of this statement is that the River Cam is not in Yorkshire. From the time the lands were granted on the River Cam (for services rendered at the Battle of Crsey) the name became Cann De Philo then Canfield. I have been unable to find any verification for the statement of Huguenot ancestry, and this contradicts some of the data on that beautifully designed and executed Canfield Tree, made in 1852, by Averill B. Canfield of South Britian, Conn.

The name, like many others of Colonial times, had various phonetic ways of spelling; Cam-philo, Camohilo, Camrofield, and Canfield. In the New Haven, Conn. records, the name appears eight out of nine times as Canfield. Since many Canfield lived for years in Hartfordshire, England, and a family by this name joined the group of Colonist followers of the Rev. Peter Prudden, it is reasonable to suppose that this family are our ancestors. They sailed from Kings' Salden, Hartfordshire, England, May 31, 1637. All located at Milford, Conn.

First Generation

*Thomas Canfield immigrated came from England to America in 1634, according to Virkus. If this is true, he preceded the Rev. Prudden families by three years. Several references state that he came soon after 1630. Another indication that he was not one of the Prudden party is that a "Thomas Coefield" signed the "Oath of Fidelity to the New Haven Colony in 1639." Since no other name for which this might have been intended has been found in early records, it is quite definitely concluded that this is our ancestor's signature.

Although considered one of its settlers, he did not locate in Milford until about 1646. His name appeared among the list of after planters (those coming after the founders) in 1648. He had a house "lots and 2 acres of meadow" granted to him by the General Court, Jan. 28, 1646. Another record says "Sergeant Thomas Canfield hath given him by the town, four acres of land for which his is to maintain a gate at New Field, being bounded with Ens Streame East, Capt. Beard South, a highway West, and Sergt. Tiballs' north." In 1646 he was recorded as a planter owning over 6 acres of land on lot no. 50 and 3 acres on lot no. 55. In 1702 he and Samuel Nettleton bought land bounded s. by Lebanon brook, e. by Milford and New Haven line, n. by Waterbury line, and w. by the line between Derby and Milford. It was the rule that each planter had to bear his share of the expense for settling and laying out land, in proportion to the amount he contributed.

At a court held at Hartford, May 13, 1669, a record says "This Court confirms Thomas Canfield and Samuel Elers Sergeants of the Traine Band of Milford." He was made freeman at Milford, Oct. 6, 1669. He represented the town as deputy in Gen. Courts held at Hartford, Oct. and Nov. 1673, May and Oct. 1674 and Oct. 12, 1678.

Several of his descendants placed a stone in Milford, marked

Sergt. Thomas Campfield
obit. 1689
Phebe Crane - His Wife

He was the brother of Matthew Campfield, said to be one of the charterers under Charles II. Thomas Campfield willed much of his land to his son Thomas (2) "To inherit after his wife Phebe's death." He willed Phebe, his beloved wife, "The liberty of my Old House and all the rooms about it during her life Time - not to be molested and to be kept in constant repair by my two sons, Thomas and Jeremiah." He specified what crops were to be raised. The will of Phebe Crane Canfield, on record in the Probate Court in New Haven, names all her children except Thomas (2), who, being dead, his son Thomas (3) received a small legacy. The first church of Milford was made up of persons who qualified as Presbyterians according to the church of Scotland. Thomas Canfield was admitted to this church March 1, 1656 and Phebe Canfield, his wife, in 1671.

He had 9 children: Sarah, Phebe, Mary, Elizabeth, Thomas, Jeremiah, Abigail, Hannah and Mehitable.

Second Generation

*Thomas (2) son of Thomas, Sr. and Phebe Crane Canfield, was but thirty-five years old at the time of his death. Little is recorded about him other than that he was a thrifty farmer, and had an estate valued at nearly 500 pounds. Some of this, of course, was his inheritance from his father, who died a short time before his own death.

The will of Thomas Canfield(2) was probated August 22, 1689. A deed dated June 26, 1701, from Jeremiah Canfield (brother of Thomas (2) ) to Eliazer Prindle states that the grantor, acting as executor under the will of "my honoured father, Thomas Canfield" is forced to sell lands of the estate to raise money with which to pay legacies.

Third Generation

*Thomas (3) son of Thomas and Rebecca Adkinson Canfield, has little recorded about him. He moved from Milford to Brandford, Conn. in 1730, at which place he lived until his death. He was the father of eight children, of whom Joel, our ancestor, was the youngest. Thomas Canfield (3) bought his brother Israel's interest in their fathers' estate in 1713.

THEORY

EXPERIMENT

1. The first part of the experiment is to determine the value of the constant  $k$  in the equation  $y = kx$ . This is done by plotting a graph of  $y$  against  $x$  and finding the slope of the line.

2. The second part of the experiment is to determine the value of the constant  $k$  in the equation  $y = kx^2$ . This is done by plotting a graph of  $y$  against  $x^2$  and finding the slope of the line.

3. The third part of the experiment is to determine the value of the constant  $k$  in the equation  $y = kx^3$ . This is done by plotting a graph of  $y$  against  $x^3$  and finding the slope of the line.

4. The fourth part of the experiment is to determine the value of the constant  $k$  in the equation  $y = kx^4$ . This is done by plotting a graph of  $y$  against  $x^4$  and finding the slope of the line.

Canfield Lineage

Sixth Generation

*William, son of Benjamin and Miriam Barton Canfield, was a pioneer of Ontario County, N.Y. He was a highway commissioner from Hopewell, N.Y. in 1822. The Antisdale Genealogy states that he kept an inn at Canandaigua, N.Y. I can find no record of this among the early Canandaigua inn-keepers. It is reasonable to suppose Canandaigua County is meant, since there were several well known inns near Manchester in the early days. Aunt Betsey Canfield stated that his children were (1) Joseph (2) Asa (3) *Sally (4) Benjamin, (5) Ann Maria (6) Julia Ann.

(1) Joseph m. Masiette Handy in Manchester, N.Y. Their children were William Erastus, Handy, Clarke, Increase Baker, Mary Jane, and two others whose name she could not recall. He moved his family to Ohio in 1832; four or five years later, moved to Ind. then back to Manchester, N.Y.

(2) Asa d. young

(3) *Sally m. Lucius Redfield (See Redfield Lineage)

(4) Benjamin m. in N.Y. and lived near Canandaigua. His chil. were John, Ward, Henrietta, Frank and Mary. He moved to Ohio in 1827.

(5) Ann Maria, known as Aunt Ann m. before she was 16, Thomas Goheen (or Gohun) in Manchester. They moved to Mich., where her husband d. and she came to Ohio in 1871. No children.

(6) Julia Ann m. Increase Baker in Manchester, lived there several years, then moved to Cincinnati, Ohio. She had 4 sons and 1 dau. Two sons d. unmarried. Her son Albert, lived in Cincinnati and d. leaving a wife and children. Another son lived in Ind. Fanny the only dau. was a noted reform worker and a bright intellectual woman. She m. Rev. Charles G. Ames and lived near Boston. They had 2 dau., Alice and Edith. Alice Ames is a well known writer of magazine articles. When William Canfield went to Ohio to visit his dau. Sally Redfield, he drove the entire distance from Canandaigua, in a carriage with two horses. He was considered a wealthy man. Both he and his wife are bur. in a small cemetery on the State Road, just South of Hopewell, N.Y.

Seventh Generation

Sarah, (Sally) dau. of William and Dorcas Antisdale Canfield
(See Redfield Lineage)

When the Canfields and Antisdales came to Ohio about 1821, they traveled overland with ox teams. They had two or three cows, As there were no fences or pasture lands, the cows wandered in the woods, and were located by cow bells. The roads were almost impassable, and the adult members of the party took turns walking, sometimes ten miles a day. They could only bring a few of the most necessary things. There was an abundance of wild turkey, and deer and plenty of wild honey in the woods. So, with the milk from their cows, they had plenty of food enroute. Tea was a great luxury. Their first homes were log houses with puncheon floors. These floors were made by making log slabs as thin as desired, with the hand tools they had brought with them. The boxes in which they had brought their goods, were used for dish shelves. Home spun blankets were used for doors and windows. The chimneys were made of native stone, as were also the fireplaces and andirons. Trails were blazed through the woods. The nearest grist mill was about 15 miles away, so a hand mortar was used to make samp from their corn. There were so many wolves and bears, that it was difficult to keep sheep and any young stock. They built a high rail pen for their protection, but even then, sheep and calves were frequently killed by the wolves and bears. The wolf pack even killed one of the large watch dogs. When Lucius Redfield came to join these relatives ten years later there was very little difference in living conditions.

Crane Lineage

Facts, deducted from research, indicate that Phebe Crane was the dau. of Hon. Jasper Crane. It is thus that Ellery B. Crane associates her, although it is possible that she was a sister of Benjamin and Henry Crane of Weathersfield. I am presuming that she is the dau. The Cranes had several coats of arms. Between the years 1635-40, John, Samuel and Jasper Crane, brothers, came from England to Mass. Jasper Crane, sometimes called "That good old saint" went to New Haven about 1639, and became a very prominent member of that Colony. As one of the first settlers, he signed the Foundamental Agreement June 4, 1639, at a general meeting of all free planters.

The New Haven Colonists acquired their land by purchase from the Indians, using clothing, blankets and trinkets as payment. The Indians, however, reserved the right to hunt and fish.

At the organization of the Government, Jasper Crane was among those (including Thomas Canfield) who signed The Oath of Fidelity. He and a Mr. Hyles, surveyed and laid out most of the town plot. for New Haven, established division lines, and settled disputed titles. He served as selectman; one of the civil managers (1639-41) freeman (1644). He received a grant of 100 A. in East Meadow March, 1641 and in 1643 his estate was voted at £ 480.

He was one of the New Haven men who were interested in the Settlement on the Delaware River, and who were so roughly treated by the Dutch. In 1644-5, he received a grant of 16 a. upland, in East Haven, and built a house on the east side of Fair Haven Green, where at least one son was born. He was then a merchant. This house lot is now the site of the Church of St. Thomas. He was interested in a bog-furnace in East New Haven, a member of the General Court, and for many years a magistrate -- a staunch, active member of New Haven Colony.

Not satisfied with his house in East Haven, he sold it Sept. 7, 1652, and became one of the first families of Brandford. He and Mr. William Swayne, were the first deputies to the General Court of Electors from Brandford in 1653 -- a position he held for five years. When New Haven Colony united with Connecticut Colony, he was not satisfied. He wished them to remain an independent colony. He joined the movement to settle Newark, New Jersey, and became one of its first settlers. He and Robert Treat were fathers of this new settlement, and had a large share of the responsibility for the colony. With 22 others, he signed the first contract in 1665, and became one of Newark's most influential men. At a town meeting held in Jan. 1668, he and Robert Treat were chosen magistrates, and deputies for the General Court. Many honors were conferred upon him, one of which was being chosen to serve on a committee made up of men from other towns, to consider the advisability of sending a petition to the Lords Proprietors in England, for the removal of grievances.

Feb. 19, 1673/9, it was discovered that many settlers, including himself, had taken lands contrary to a town agreement. He stated at a town meeting, that he would give up all lands so taken, if the others would. This entry seems to mark the close of the Hon. Jasper Crane's public life -- he who, next to Robert Treat, was probably the most prominent figure in the early settlement of Newark, New Jersey. By popular vote, he had filled the highest and most responsible positions of public trust, wherever he lived. He was an old man when he died.

First Generation

*Rev. William Eddy or Eddye, lived in England during the lifetime of William Shakespeare. He matriculated as "sizer" at Trinity Hall, University of Cambridge. He received his degree of B.A. in 1583. A "Sizer" is one who performs certain duties in part payment for school expenses. He served as Curate at Thurston, a small parish near Cambridge, while continuing his study at the University, from which he received his M.A. in 1586. From that time on until his death, he was Vicar of St. Dunstan's Cranbrooke. The first year of his married life was the exciting one in English History, when the Spanish Armada was defeated. Cranbrooke was near the seacoast. Rev. Eddy was a man of considerable wealth. In 1922 the inventory of his large estate was discovered. It contained such obsolete words as

Standard	chest
Brand irons	fire dogs
Chaffer	chafing-dish
Boulter	sieve
Dornix	linsey wolsey
Feel	long handled shovel for culling bread from ovens.
Hutch	chest or box
Mackadow	wool and silk substitute for velvet
Trug	basket with handle

His wife was the dau. of John and Ellen (Munn) Fosten, who were m. 1-19-1562.

Rev. William Eddy was very methodical, a strict Episcopalian, wise in his councils, humane in his advice and a repudiator of immorality.

Second Generation

*John, son of Rev. William and Mary Fosten Eddy, immigrant ancestor, came to America with the Puritans on the Handmaid, Capt. Grant, Master, which left London 8-10-1630. With him was his wife Amie, and at least two of his children. It took them 12 weeks to make the voyage, and they arrived at Plymouth Harbor, 10-29-1630. Genealogists say that he and his brother Samuel, were the two gentle-men aboard. Less than two weeks after landing he left to join his friends, the Winthrops at the Bay Colony. There was an agreement between the colonies, that a man could not go from one Colony to another, with dismissal papers. As John Eddy did not have these, he was obliged to return to the Captain Standish Colony at Plymouth, where he remained about two years. He received his dismissal 2-26-1631/2, and was received into the Bay Colony. Gov.

Bradford wrote of him "A godly man, now and then a little distempered."

The settlement at Watertown, Mass., was rapidly growing to be the largest in New England. He went to this settlement in 1633, and was made freeman from that place 9-3-1634. He immediately became one of the most influential men of Watertown. By vote of his fellow citizens, he was one of the threemen selected for ordering "Civil Affairs", the highest honor the town could bestow upon him. He held various offices of trust, among which was Towne Clerk and the first pages of the Town's books were written by him. When he first went to Watertown, he came into possession of a Homestall of forty acres, on the west side of the present Mt. Auburn Street. He later received several other grants, and became a large land owner. He was a member of a military company for over 36 years. When he was 62 years old, he petitioned the Court, asking to be excused from military duty. The request was granted, but later he was called to training, and found he could only be excused by paying a fine. He must have had a humorous character, for he wrote a letter to the authorities, begging them to give him youthful strength and vigor, if they expected the service of a young man. His wife was the dau. of *John and *Dorothy Doget of Groton, Co., Suffolk, Eng.

By purchase, he added to this, and became a large land owner. He was a cordwainer by trade. He held various offices of trust such a tything-man, fence viewer, and town sealer of leather.

His wife was the dau. of Gabriel and Joanna Meade, the latter probably being his father's second wife. Gabriel Meade located in Dorchester, Mass., and was made freeman May 2, 1638. Born in Eng. he died at Dorchester, Mass., 5-12-1666 age 77. Both Samuel Eddy and his wife were very active in church work.

MEMORANDUM

TO: THE SECRETARY OF THE ARMY

FROM: THE CHIEF OF THE BUREAU OF MILITARY AFFAIRS

SUBJECT: PROPOSAL FOR THE REORGANIZATION OF THE BUREAU OF MILITARY AFFAIRS

1. The purpose of this memorandum is to propose a reorganization of the Bureau of Military Affairs to improve its efficiency and effectiveness in carrying out its duties.

2. The proposed reorganization is based on the following principles:

- a. The Bureau should be organized into a small number of divisions, each with a clear and distinct function.
- b. The divisions should be organized in a hierarchical manner, with a clear line of authority from the Chief of the Bureau down to the lowest level of the organization.
- c. The divisions should be organized in a manner that allows for the most efficient use of the Bureau's resources.

3. The proposed reorganization is as follows:

- a. The Bureau of Military Affairs will be divided into three divisions: the Division of Operations, the Division of Administration, and the Division of Intelligence.
- b. The Division of Operations will be responsible for the planning and execution of military operations.
- c. The Division of Administration will be responsible for the management of the Bureau's personnel, finances, and other administrative matters.
- d. The Division of Intelligence will be responsible for the collection, analysis, and dissemination of intelligence information.

4. The proposed reorganization is expected to result in a more efficient and effective Bureau of Military Affairs, which will be better able to carry out its duties in support of the Army.

5. The proposed reorganization is being submitted for your consideration and approval.

6. Very respectfully,
 [Signature]

First Generation

*Edward Griswold, or Greswold, was the son of *Matthew Griswold. whose family was known as Greswold of Solihill, Warwickshire, England.

Edward Griswold, immigrant Puritan ancestor, came to America as a member of Rev. Ephriam Huit's Company. With him was his wife, several young children, and a younger brother, Matthew Griswold. They arrived at Windsor, Conn., about August 17, 1639, and were recorded among its first settlers. When the first recorded division of land was made at Windsor, Jan., 1640, he received his share. About 1642, he, two of his sons, and several other families moved to an outlying section of Windsor, called Poquonock. He had the corner lot of 29 acres, bounded both south and west by Stony Creek. Poquonock was quite near some Indians, and taking into consideration the dangers these remote settlers encountered, the general court allowed one soldier to be exempt from training on military days, and to remain at home to protect these families from the depredations of the Indians. The order excused "one Soulger member of each of these families from training day, requiring that he who tarryes at home stands about the aforesaid howses uppon his sentinel posture."

In an affidavit, Edward Griswold stated that when he came to Windsor in 1639, land was high priced, and it was expected many from England would locate there. When the people did not come, land prices dropped to half the original valuation. He was frequently mentioned in Windsor Colonial Records, and served as Deputy to the General Court, almost continuously from 1656 to 1677.

Edward Griswold moved from Windsor to Saybrooke, Conn. and from there to Killingworth, Conn.. where he was recorded as a first settler, and given a grant of 200 acres of land, Oct. 1674. The present Clinton, Conn., was originally a part of Killingworth, and its main street is almost the identical location of the early settlers' homes. Edward Griswold was largely "instrumental in establishing the first Church and its first deacon." He was on the committee for the establishment for a Latin School at New London; judge for Killingworth 1667 to 1677; Deputy for Killingworth 1667 to 1677; and attorney and magistrate 1662-1689. He built the old fort at Springfield, Mass., for William Pynchon in 1659. His contracts specified that he would receive forty pounds for the construction, including stone and brick work. The hewn logs needed were prepared by his future son-in-law - - eighteen year old Samuel Buell. This building stood until 1831, being the only brick building in Springfield prior to 1800.

Very old land grants on file in the office of the Sec. of State in Hartford, show that Edward Griswold had grants amounting to 500 acres, One grant of 100 acres, was given him by the town of Killingworth. It is said that he named Killingworth for his English parish Kenilworth. He was a sturdy, intellectual man who was always prominent in the affairs of the new settlements. His burial place is unknown.

Margaret Hicks Griswold, wife of Edward, was the dau. of *Robert Hicks, who m. (1) Margaret Morgan, who d. 1607 (2) Margaret Winslow. Margaret Hicks Griswold has the oldest grave in the Clinton Congregational Cemetery, the tombstone being simply marked-M.G.

Their names appeared as follows: Edward, husbandman age 60, Elizabeth aged 50, Jeremie aged 21, Sara aged 12, Ephriam age 9, Isaac aged 7, and William aged 6." They settled at Lynn, Mass., where in 1636, he was recorded as owning 210 acres. He was made freeman 12-8-1636, and became a highly respected citizen.

Savage records him as one of the first settlers of Lynn, and says he came from Barkhamptead, Co. Herts, England. He was a representative to the General Colonial Court in 1638.

Edward Howe died very suddenly, and Winthrop records his death as follows: "One Mr. Hove of Lynn, a godly man, and a deputy of the last General Court, after the Court was ended, and he had dined, being in health as he used to be, went to pass over to Charlestown, and being alone, he was presently after found upon the strand, being there waiting for the boat which came soon after."

It is thought that Jeremiah Howe kept an inn, for he was licensed "to sell strong water by pints or Quarts."

He was listed as freeman, New Haven, October 1668. In 1675, he had an estate of 24 $\frac{1}{2}$  acres in New Haven. His wife may have been Elizabeth Peck, dau. of Deacon Paul Peck of Hartford, Mass.

Hull Lineage

First Generation

* Matthew Hull of Lurksbere, Parish of St. Leonards, County of Cornwall, England, married *Johanna, dau. of *Thomas Yeard of Newton-bushel. Their children were Thomas, *George, Margaret, Ann and Alice. They had a coat of arms.

Second Generation

* George Hull, immigrant ancestor, sailed from Plymouth, England March 30, 1629 on the Mary and John, captain Squeb. He settled first at Dorchester, Mass., from which place he was admitted freeman by the Gen. Court of Mass., March 4, 1632. He was a representative for Dorchester to the first great and General Court of delegates held in the Colony, May 14, 1634; member of Dorchesters' first board of selectmen, and in 1633-34 was "appointed to fix the rate." The Common seemed to have been allotted to the early settlers, and George Hull, one of the plantation officers, had two acres and "It is ordered that George Hull shall have the meadow that lyes before his doore where he now dwells, to Henry Weyes, down to the Sea, making a sufficient passidge that way."

He moved to Windsor, Conn., in 1636, and surveyed both Windsor and Wethersfield. He was a representative to the General Court which met at Hartford May 1, 1637, and declared War against the Pequot Indians. This declaration was brought about by the Indians capturing three women and six men who were on their way to work in the Wethersfield meadow, and then murdering them. His most intimate friend was Roger Ludlow, with whom he had come to America. Wherever Ludlow went, he followed. When Roger Ludlow was Lieut. Gov. of Mass., and later of Conn., it was George Hull who was his assistant, being named Asst. Lieut. Gov. of Conn. in 1637. As an original settler of Windsor, he helped lay it out. April 5, 1638, he and Roger Ludlow were granted by the Gen. Court exclusive right to trade for beavers with the Indians at Windsor.

He was always called Mr. Hull on the records. He followed Ludlow to Fairfield in 1646, and in 1649 was a Lieut. in Fairfield military operations. In 1651-53-54, he was Asst. Magistrate for all the towns "by the sea." This authorized him "to marry persons and to press horses for public welfare." He was constantly associated with Roger Ludlow. In 1656 he witnessed an Indian deed, executed to cover lands including Fairfield. Judge of Fairfield, May 1654, surveyor, statesman, legislator, instrumental in establishing Mass. and Conn. as free states, always public spirited, Trumbull places him with men whose names are worth of perpetuation.

He married Thamzen Michell, dau. of *Robert Michell, well-to-do yeoman of Stockland (probably Devon Co.) and all his children were born in England.

Third Generation

* Josiah, immigrant ancestor, son of George and Thamzen Michell Hull, came to America with his parents in 1629, and lived with them at Dorchester, Mass., and Windsor, Conn., where he married Elizabeth Loomis in 1641. In 1640, he had a house lot granted to him near his father's. He was deputy to the Gen. Court in 1659-60-62. In 1662, he moved to Killingworth, Conn., and was elected First Town Clerk of Killingworth 1663-64. He was made freeman from Fairfield, Co., in 1662; member of the Grand Jury; Deputy to the General Court 1659-60-62-67-74: The General Assembly held at Hartford Oct. 11, 1666 "Doth confirm Josiah's Hull Senr Lieutenant to ye Trainband at Killingworth alias Homonascet." At a court meeting held at Hartford May 11, 1671, he was appointed commissioner for "ye yeare ensuing."

First Generation

*Robert Lockwood, immigrant, came to New England about 1630. He settled in Watertown, Mass., where he was freeman March 9, 1636/7. He is recorded as one of the first settlers of Fairfield, Conn., 1641, from which place he was freeman May 20, 1652. He was appointed "Sergeant of a Traine Band" at Fairfield, May 1657.

May 13, 1654, Susan Lockwood, wife of Robert, testified in a witch case held at New Haven, Conn. She stated that she was present when "Goodwife Knapp was hanged for a witch."

Robert Lockwood had ten children, six of whose births are recorded at Watertown, Mass. His estate in Conn. was valued at over 467 pounds.

Second Generation

*Gershom, son of Robert and Susannah Lockwood, was a Lieut. in the Colonial Army in 1692. As he grew to manhood, he took up the trade of carpentry and became Greenwich's principal builder and carpenter. He held many offices of trust, and was one of the twenty-seven proprietors of Greenwich, Conn.

Gershom Lockwood's marriage was romantic. Lady Ann Millington was said to have run away to America in search of her lover, a dashing young British officer of whom her family disapproved. Failing to find him, she taught school in Greenwich, met and married Gershom Lockwood. In 1660, her parents, Lord, and Lady Millington, sent her a well built and finely carved oaken chest. Family tradition says it was filled with many fine silk gowns and a half bushel of English guineas, and that a descendant still has the chest. Mr. Samuel Ferris of Greenwich had it in 1888.

Gershom Lockwood was one of the prominent and most influential men of Greenwich up to 1685. It has been said that Lady Ann was one of the town's earliest leaders of society and that the church seating arrangement was in relationship to her.

"It is indeed a blessing when the virtues of noble races are hereditary
And do derive themselves from imitation of virtuous ancestors."

*William, son of Deacon Abraham, Jr. and Mary Lockwood, moved to Springfield, Vermont in 1772. With him was his wife and ten children. He was one of Springfield's early settlers. Recognizing water power possibilities, he bought land on the west side of the Conn. River, then a dense wilderness with great pines and hemlocks. He built a log cabin near the falls. This was later replaced by a block house. His sons helped him clear the land, build a dam, saw lumber for building and then soon had a grist mill operating. They also built a bridge across the falls, cutting down some of the tallest trees and letting them fall across the chasm as stringers. This bridge was condemned about 1796. He later bought land on the east side of the river, which included the present cemetery, bought from him by popular subscription, and deeded to the town in 1793.

Third Generation

*Joseph, son of John, Jr. and Agnes Lyngwood Loomis, was a woolen draper of Braintree, Co. Essex, England. As his name appeared first on his father's will, it is thought he was the oldest son. April 11, 1638, he, his wife, five sons and three daughters sailed from London on the Susan and Ellen. Edward Payne, Master. Their household goods had been shipped to London from Maldon, nearest seaport to Braintree.

They arrived at Boston, July 17, of the same year, and they probably spent a few months in Dorchester, Mass. In the fall of 1639, they went overland, no doubt as followers of Rev. Ephriam Huit, to Windsor, Conn. It took about two weeks to make this trip from Mass. to Conn., following Indian trails and driving their stock before them. On Feb. 2, 1640, he had granted to him from The Plantation 21 acres adjoining the Farmington River, and on the west side of the Conn. River. This grant was on the south side of the Farmington near its junction with the Conn. River, and on "The Island," so called because at every freshet it became an island temporarily cut off from the rest of the town by the overflow of the Conn. River.

Joseph Loomis acquired considerably more property on the east side of the Conn. River, by grant from the town, and by purchase. He served as juryman several times, and was called Elder. His wife Mary White Loomis, was 48 years old when they came to America, and their youngest child was ten years old. She was the dau. of *Robert and *Bridget Algar White, wealthy residents of Shalford and Messing, England.

First Generation

Samuel Mills, immigrant, is believed to have come from Lancashire, England, before 1640. He was recorded as working for Henry Tatham at Weymouth, Mass., 3-11-1640, at which time he said he was 21 years old. I have found a record which says "Samuel Mills subscribed to the 'dedham covenant' March 10, 1636."

The early history of Dedham has unusual interest. Needham was originally a part of it, and it was located at the falls of the St. Charles River.

The proprietors drew up a very explicit covenant about 1636. This said that married men would be given 12 acres of land, unmarried men, 8 acres, and no one could sell without permission from the company. All persons were examined as to character and no one could bring a servant without a testimony of good character and the understanding that the servant was not entitled to lands. All town expenses were to be shared, and all laws necessary for the management of their "temporal affairs for religion and for living society," were to be obeyed. No free grants were made to strangers. Cows and goats were apportioned, one for each 3 pounds estate valuation. Absence from town meetings was punishable by a fine of one shilling for the first half hour, and 3 shillings for the entire meeting. They bound themselves and their successors to the true observance of the covenant. In 1642, there were 47 proprietors.

Samuel Mills was listed as a townsman 1644-45, and was made a member of the Dedham Church before 1646. He gave two rather quaint mortgages to Gov. Thomse Dudley. The first, for eight pounds on 12 acres, interest payable semi-annually in "Cleare Theate," butter and cheese. The second for 6 pounds, 6 shillings, 3 pence, on a dwelling, barn and 10 acres, payment to be made April and October, in wheat, cheese and butter, at 6 pence per pound - or its equivalent in money - dated 1643, for 3 years. This debt was for a cow.

In 1644, the townsmen decided to devote a portion of their land to the support of schools. The schoolmaster was paid 20 pounds a year until 1695 when his salary was raised to 25 pounds. In 1664, the settlers agreed that each married man should have a house lot of 12 acres, part upland, part meadow. Most of the houses or cabins were built of logs, and had thatched roofs, valuation from 3 to 5 pounds. The meeting house, built in 1637, was torn down in 1672, and replaced by a larger one. The men were seated on one side of the gallery, the women on the other side, while boys sat in the front gallery. The largest taxpayer had the best seat. Ministers were first paid by voluntary contributions, later by taxation.

In 1674, Samuel Mills conveyed to his son Benjamin, 20 acres bounded north by "Charles River, together with two cow commons." His name occurs regularly from 1672 to 1687 on the Dedham tax assessments for church, school, town and war. In 1686, he and his son, Benjamin, were granted liberty to fell timber for fencing land. He was granted land in 1671, and bought some in 1674.

The town voted that no Indians were to be "entertayned." May 12, 1676, the following item appeared on the records. "Be it known that we, Sam Mills and Ben Mills (his son) do joyntly and severally binde our selve, heyers, and exectors, in the venaall some of eighty Pounds in curret countery payments to secure the Towne from damage that may come by Twoo young Endians ; put to us by authority of the countery, I say we the above says Samuel and Ben Mills to binde Selvs; as is above expressed to the selectmen of Dedham for the time bevinge; and we do further Ingage to pay; or cause to be payed to the Towne or the order of the Towne, five shillings each vs for our neglecting the order of the Towne refering to entertayninge without liberty;

This above says ten shillings is satisfied by a wolfe killed by Ben Milles." King Phillips Indian War, imposed an enormous tax on the townsden - over one shilling for every pound of real estate valuation.

Samuel Mills was granted a bill of seven pounds, 10-29-1679 for his salary in keeping school. This item appears February 13, 1680. "Ser Sight and Samuel Milles did com and make a motion to have liberty to build a bridge over Charles River at the place comly called the passage over at the Cannoes to the great playne. Motion granted." Samuel Mills was one of twenty men who signed an agreement of satisfaction of the things agreed upon by the selectmen for apportioning taxes.

The Milles family was one of the oldest in Dedham - their motto - Amor Patriae - Love of County.

Second Generation

Benjamin, son of Samuel and Frances Pimbrook Mills, lived in Dedham all his life. His name was often mentioned on the town assessments for school, church, town and war taxes. He must have been an unusually good hunter, for he was frequently paid the ten shillings bounty for killing a wolfe. One time, he was paid bounty for killing three. Selectman, 1711-1719; surveyor of highways 1715; assessor, 1719, tythingman, 1714; and on Feb. 8, 1711/12, was elected constable, the first and only one the town ever had. Feb 2, 1681, he surveyed the line between Watertown and Dedham, for which service he received two shillings. A record dated April 19, 1682 reads "Benjamin Milles haveing a servant maide that the Selectmen allow him not to keepe; doe give notice to hime to put her away; which he insage forth with to doe." He was granted small pancel of land 1-11-1676, and again 1-11-1678, "granted small pancel of land 1 $\frac{1}{2}$  acres or less which is flowed by his mill also the place where his mill stands." On July 2, 1705, this record appeared. "This day said Selectmen gave their approbation that Benjamin Mills Sen. may Recevelicense to keep a house of Publick entertainment upon the road leading from Boston to Sherborn at the lover falls of Charles River." This tavern was the oldest in Dedham, and the place where the Royal Governors and other dignataries stopped for refreshment when traveling inland. Benjamin Mills was appointed

William, youngest child of Benjamin and Mary Thorne Mills, lived in the then adjoining town of Needham, and was one of the original members of The First Church of Christ, 3-30-1719. He was field-driver in 1713; fence viewer 1717; selectman and assessor, 1732. His wife was the dau. of Samuel and Ann Herring Woodcock, who were married in Dedham 2-12-1713.

William Jr., son of William and Hannah Woodcock Mills, had according to the historian, Mrs. Hammond, a distinguished record as a soldier in the Revolutionary War. Aside from the length of time he served, I have not been able to find records of unusual service. The Mass. Archives say - "William Mills - list of men mustered by Thomas Newhall, Muster Master for Worcester Co. endorsed July 1777; Capt. Treadwell's Co., Col. After his marriage, William Mills, Jr., lived in Oxford, Worcester Co., Mass., until 1787, when he moved to Eaton, Madison Co., N.Y. From our Bible records, he had the following children.

Fifth Generation

William 2nd., son of William, Jr. and Eunice Eddy Mills, even though a baby, was the comfort of his mother during the Revolutionary War. They were very poor, and these were dark days for her. Little William had to go barefooted the year around, not only because of lack of means, but also the difficulty in getting footwear at that time. My grandmother said he had his first pair of new shoes soon after his 3th birthday.

William Mills 2nd, his wife and nine children, left Eaton, New York in 1836, bound for the Vestery Reserve. Lucius Medfield left New York state the same year, bound for the same destination. It was autumn, and they traveled overland with horses and wagons, and took 13 days for the trip. They stopped at Menton, Ohio for a few weeks, then moved on to Auburn, Geauga Co., where they purchased a section of land on the north and south center road, north west section of Auburn. I have an old hand made map of this Mills tract of land, showing school districts, and the names of the land owners. On the reverse side, there is a plan of the seven room house with a 14 x 5 "stoop".

One day, William Mills and his wife, Hanny Burnett Mills, were returning home from a funeral at South Newbury. They were horseback and she was riding a spirited four year old black stallion. Suddenly a litter of small pigs ran out from the roadside. Her horse was frightened and she was thrown off backwards, breaking her neck. She only lived one hour after the accident.

His obituary written for the Chagrin Falls Exponent, read as follows: "Salmon Miller, the centenarian, died at his home in this place (Mayfield, Ohio) Tuesday last. He would have been 105 years old had he lived until Sept. 7 next. Mr. Miller was born in Bennington, Vermont, Sept. 2, 1781 and in 1798 he moved to New York in 1801 to Penn., and back to N.Y. in 1844, where he lived until he moved to this state in 1843. Jefferson, in 1804, and has remained firm for the party ever since. He was a soldier in the War of 1812. He was a good horseman, having had some of the best horses of his time. He was a natural musician, a great wrestler, and was known to have done the double shuffle at 100 years to perfection. He lived with his wife until she died in 1880, a period of 70 years." My sister, Winifred, told me that it was at our home he danced the double shuffle, when he was 100 years old. She played the piano, great Uncle Edwin Miller played the violin and great grandfather not only did not miss a step, but he also kept the rythm perfectly. Alonzo Dallas, son of Salmon and Selinda Leonard Miller, was also a good musician and fine horseman. He and his brother, Edwin, who m. Desire Fisher, played the violin, and my mother played the dulcimer. These three musicians furnished the music for many dances in the near by portion of the Western Reserve.

Grandfather's favorite horses were a team of beautiful spirited black stallions. He had a matched string of hand made, hand etched brass sleigh bells, graduated in size, and harmoniously chimed. My mother said these bells always announced their arrival at winter dances. It took my grandfather several years to collect these bells to suit his sense of harmony. They are now in the possession of my daughter.

Alonzo Miller was a tavern keeper in Chagrin Falls, near the present Hogs Back Hill, and later at an inn in South Newbury, which burned many years ago. Both he and his wife, were buried in a small cemetery at the south east boundery of Chagrin Falls. This was abandoned several years ago, and the remains of those interred were moved to Restland Cemetery, Bainbridge, Ohio.

Eighth Generation

Celinda Abigail, dau. of Alonso Dallas and Jemima Mills Miller, was the youngest of their two children. Her sister Ermina, 17 years older, married Thomas Burt, an Englishman. They lived in Michigan, and had several daughters. Their only son died young.

My mother was born in a log cabin located diagonally opposite the present Mill's homestead in Auburn, Ohio. My grandmother's dearest possession in those early days was glass enough for two windows brought by her family when they came overland to Ohio from New York state. My mother also recalled that her mother made starch by putting water on sliced raw potatoes, then letting the water evaporate.

At the time grandfather kept taverns, my grandmother and Aunt Ermina did the work, while mother, small, handsome, and very popular, was assigned the duty of entertaining the guests. She showed marked musical ability at a very young age, and became an efficient dulcimer player. In her early teens, she was a school teacher in rural Chagrin Falls and Solon. Her school was located on the River Road in Chagrin Falls, and in Solon she had among her pupils, niece and nephews of President Garfield. President Garfield selected the first book bought with her own savings - a large Wooster Dictionary. She loved to study this book, and thus became very fluent in the use of words. One of President Garfield's nieces loaned mother a quilt - and last hand work of "Grandma Garfield" and made by her while she was visiting her son in the White House. From this original, simple, in design, my mother made blue and white copies for each of her children, designing an original border.

For many years, my parents' home was the center for young folks, attracted by mother's musical, dramatic and literary traits. She was an excellent coach for the neighborhood plays and entertainments. For many years she reported South Newbury news for the Chagrin Falls Exponent and Geauga Co. Newspapers, under the pen name of Duo.

South Newbury was a pioneer center of Suffrage and Temperance work and my mother was an active leader of the Cold Water Army (for young children) The Loyal Legion (for older children) and The Sons of Temperance. She was instrumental in bringing such speakers to the Chapel as President Garfield, John B. Gough, Neil Dow and Susan B. Anthony. My brother was always commissioned to deliver the hand bills announcing the event, and from this was given the nickname of "Doc." People who knew him then, still call him by that name. The Chapel was built by those early suffrage leaders, to be used for "freedom of speech." The land was donated by Isaac Butts, and so long as this building stands, does not revert to the Butts family. A full account of this early suffrage movement, its inception, its trials, its development, and its achievements, may be found in the Archives of Lakewood Chapter D.A.R. Mother was the last living person of those who planted the Centennial Oak at South Newbury, July 4, 1876.

Mother was an expert needlewoman, and her family had many beautiful examples of her handwork. Her mind was keen and active to within a few days of her death, and her interest in modern young people never abated. She desired cremation, and her ashes were placed in the family lot in South Newbury Cemetery. She had the love and devotion of her children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren.

Phillips Line

1. John Phillips came from Milton, England in 1843 when he was 20 years of age. With him was his wife and an infant daughter. Milton is a small town between Dover and London. It took them six weeks to cross the Atlantic on a sailing boat. He was a tailor by trade and immediately located at Albany, where he lived for nine years. He and his family went by canal boat, from Albany to Syracuse, but thinking Oswego had a greater future, he journeyed on to that place. He was a man of quiet simple taste, and abhorred obtrusiveness. He lived in Oswego for over 50 years, having his own tailoring establishment. He saw the town grow and prosper, then decline commercially, and develop into a manufacturing city.

Seeger Lineage

1. Johannes Wilhelm Seeger was a Major in New York troops. His place of residence during the Revolutionary War was Sand Hill, N.Y. He served as Major under Nicholas Herkimer, and was wounded at the Battle of Oriskany, dying four months later at Fort Plain. His son, Capt. Jacob Seeger, wounded in the same battle, was taken to Little Falls, where an attempt was made to amputate his leg. He bled to death. Another son Adolph Seeger, was killed on the Criskany battlefield, while two other sons, Johannes Wilhelm 2nd and Johannes Conrad escaped uninjured. Johannes Wilhelm Seeger, 2nd was made a Lieutenant after the battle.

First Generation

*William Ward, was first recorded as being in America in 1639. The proprietors of the plantation of Sudbury, Mass., made three divisions of land - one in 1639 and two in 1640. William Ward shared in each of these three divisions. It is thought that he came from Yorkshire or Derbyshire, England. When he came to the Mass. Bay Colony, Boston was about 8 years old. He had with him his second wife and five children. Permission was given by the General Court, 9-6-1638 "to go on in their plantation," and William Ward and others had made clearings with their ox teams, and felled trees for cabins. He was about 35 years old then. The settlers were allotted as follows: -

"To every Mr. of a ffamylie

06 akers,"

"To every wiffe

06 akers and  $\frac{1}{2}$ "

"To every childe

01 akers and  $\frac{1}{2}$ "

"To every mare, cow, ox or anny other cattle that may amount to 20 pound or soe much monnye

3 akers."

William's share was 23 $\frac{1}{2}$  acres.

First Generation

He was freeman 5-10-1643, and represented Sudbury to the General Court in 1644. He served on many important committees. His holdings increased by township division of lands, grants given in recognition of special service, and by purchase, until he owned between 2 and 3 hundred acres. He was chairman of the Selectmen for several years, and still held this position when he left Sudbury in 1660.

In 1656, William Ward and twelve others petitioned the General Court for a new plantation, 8 miles square, and located about 8 miles from Sudbury. They said in their petition "which wee conceive might bee comfortable for our subsistence." They were granted "6 miles square." This plantation was incorporated in 1660, as Marlborough. He was chosen deacon of the first church organized. The house lots ranged from 15 to 50 acres each, and each family had their proportion of Common Land. His was a 50 a. lot, nearly opposite the meeting house, and not far from the present Gates Academy. He, like all the others, endured great hardships and losses. The hostile Indians burned his buildings, destroyed his cattle and his son Eleazer, a young married man, was shot down in sight of his home. William Ward had 14 children.

Second Generation

*John, son of William and -- Ward, came to America with his father in 1639. He m. Hannah Jackson, dau. of Edward and Frances Jackson of Cambridge, later called Newton. After his marriage, he settled in Newton, and built a home on a 45 a. tract of land belonging to his father-in-law. This was later deeded to him, and prior to, and during King Philip's War, it was fortified as a garrison. He was a turner by trade, but farmed extensively. He was made freeman in 1649. He increased his holdings to several hundred acres.

When Newton became a separate township in 1679, John Ward was elected to its first board of selectmen, and was re-elected several times. He was the first representative to the "Great and General Court," which office he held for 9 years, and deacon of the first church in Newton.

C O N C L U S I O N

From my study of the family, I have made the following observations:

While they seem to have been plain, substantial people they were industrious, perserverant, energetic, dependable citizens. Education and freedom of thought seemed to have been an important factor in each generation, though one frequently found the "self-made" man. Characteristics which seem to have been handed down even to the present generation are consideration of others and the love of travel.

"What you have inherited from your fathers, you must earn for yourself, before you can call it yours."
